Correction

In an article about former historian Wescoat Wilkie in the March 11 issue of the TIMES-VIRGINIAN, the writer of that article made an error. Hugh Gurney was the person present during Mr. Wolfe's address to the Hagerstown, Maryland, Civil War Roundtables. Mr. Gurney is the son of the former Park superintendent, Hubert A. Gurney. The former superintendent, Mr. Hubert A. Gurney, Sr., passed away during 1961. We deeply regret this mix-up in names.

In the TIMES-VIRGINIAN on March 11 a listing of Civil War Companies from this county included Major Joel West Floyd's Company, Co. H, Second Virginia Cavalry.

In working on this article, the TIMES staff used an actual TIMES-VIRGINIAN listing from a paper of the early 1900's. In this article, yellow with age and carefully preserved at the National Park here, the Roll of Company Joel W. Floyd, promoted A.D.C. Rempert's staff." As the reader will note, this denotes that Capt. Floyd received a promotion to serve as Aide-de-Camp to General Rempert. And as county residents may already know, Joel West Floyd was called "Major". We hope this clarifies the situation for anyone who was left with the impression that Major Floyd was a Captain rather than a Major.

Centennial

ear between the Blue and the Gray:

When thousands of young Americans
Displayed incredible courage each day.
Each Soldier in those perilous years
Felt that he was fighting for the rights
And would never have thought of retreating
Though the cannon balls zoomed all night.
There were numerous brave Heroes
Who fought with pride and gallantry;
Under every conceivable circumstance,
In a treetop — even under the Sea.
Many on both sides paid the Ultimate Price
Far away from home and family;
And their valient deeds of glory
Are known O God — only unto Thee.
So as we observe the Civil War Centennial
May we pause — and ponder— and pray
That each Soul may rest in Eternal Peace.

The Pastor Speaks

Rev. Thomas Waddill

We want to express our appreciation to Chaplain Temple for his helpful articles on the work of a hospital chaplain. It is my hope that many of you who have met him through this column will find his ministry more meaningful when you or a loved one must be in Lynchburg General Hospital.

. . . At midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God . . ." Most of us recognize the setting of these words. Paul and Silas were in prison. Having been unjustly arrested and cruelly beaten, they were bound hand and foot in a damp, smelly prison. In the midst of these conditions their hearts were so full of joy that they broke forth with songs of praises.

Jesus, in preparing his disciples for his going, spoke these words, "Your hearts will rejoice and no one will take your joy from you." From the very beginning the story of salvation has been called Good news. (Gospel means good news). Joy characterized the earliest followers of Christ. Wherever they went, whatever the circumstances, their joy overflowed.

Somewhere in the intervening centuries this joy has been lost. The average person pictures a christian as having a long face, little laughter and no joy in life. Though there are notable exceptions, they are exceptions and not the rule. He who has experienced the forgiving grace of God and realizes its meaning to him will have joy unspeakable. In the words of a chorus popular among young people, "I have a joy, joy, joy, joy down in my heart . . . to stay." Another stanza says, "I know the devil doesn't like it but its down in my heart . . . to stay!"

I am afraid that many times the devil succeeds in convincing us that Christianity is a heavy burden, hard to bear, and that its main purpose is to take all the joy out of life. Jesus said, "My yoke is easy and my burden is light. The person who truly forsakes all and follows Him invariably discovers the truth of these words. Jesus also likened the Kingdom of heaven to a man who found a treasure in a field and for Joy sold all he had to purchase the field.

In His wisdom God did not make this joy dependent upon outward circumstances but upon the experience of His forgiving grace. I pray that each of you may find this joy. "Your hearts will rejoice and no one will take your joy from you."

Thomas A. Waddill, Pastor
Spout Spring Baptist Church

Are You Ready?

Lesson for March 28, 1965

After a person has died, obituaries are written. People who knew the dead man (or woman) will recall the circumstances and achievements, if any, of the man who is now gone. His life and character will be judged by many, if he is a prominent person known all over the nation; or by few if his life was obscure. But judged he will be, more than ever in his lifetime, for good or ill. The story is closed, the evidence is all in. . . But no, it is not all in. There is much about every human being which others can never know. Only God has all the evidence. only God knows what the man was really like, inside. So God and only God can be the final judge. Only he can say 'Well done' at last.

The Door Can Be Shut

Our Lord told a number of parables about the last judgment. It is true that many of His judgments do not wait for some Last Day; injustice and other sins are often punished almost as soon as committed.

One of these parables is the familiar one about the ten maidens, five wise and five foolish. There are three points that most people would say are very clear here. One is that there is going to be a closed door, and not everybody will be on the same side. As has been said by a famous man, we should not feel too sure about the furnishings of heaven nor the temperature of hell; but we can't shut our eyes to that closed door. There comes a time when it is no longer possible to hope. There comes a time when choice is no longer possible, a time when the very One who invited you must say to you, "I never knew you." It is not true (though we may wish it were) that every soul on earth is heavenward bound. Some sin themselves — or sleep themselves—into the outer darkness.

What You Don't Do

Those foolish virgins who found themselves shut out from the wedding feast could say truthfully that they had done nothing wrong. Maybe not; the trouble with them was not what they did but what they forgot to do. They were not malicious nor selfish; they had simply not been thinking, they were not ready for a simple emergency such as the bridegroom's coming late. It is pretty easy to think of the bad things we never did, and take credit to ourselves for not doing them. It is easy to take credit for the good things we have done. It's a sorry sort of person who has never done something good! But these foolish girls were not shut out because of anything they had done; it was what they didn't do.

Fatal as Sin

There is no parable of Five Foolish Virgins. Only of Five Foolish Virgins. You can just hear them saying, "I didn't think . . ." Not thinking was silly. But foolishness can be as fatal as sin. How often we hear the story, how often we have taken a part in it ourselves! "I might have known that remark would hurt her, but I didn't think . . ." "It never occurred to me how badly I had been treating Negroes . . ." "I had a chance at an education, but I was only a high school kid, and I didn't think . . ." "I wish I had let her know while she was living how much I appreciated her, but I never thought . . ." "The stuff had been in the refrigerator quite a while, but I didn't think . . ." So it goes, and it will go, to the end of time perhaps. But it is not Judgment Day yet. Your list of "I didn't thinks" may be a long one; but you can stop adding to it today. Think! Are you ready?
